The Eagle was Britain's best-selling boys' magazine in the 1950s, selling about a million copies each week. And readers of the era fondly remember the Cutaways: beautifully detailed drawings of the inner workings of just about anything, from steam trains, planes, and racecars to suspension bridges. This collection showcases the very best, revealing why their in-depth look at technology and their vision of the future so captivated an entire generation of schoolboys.
